Personal Statement

Anne Brennan Malec is a licensed clinical psychologist and a marriage and family therapist, and the managing partner at Symmetry Counseling in Chicago's Loop. In her work with individuals and couples, Anne is adept at encouraging clients to explore how their finances affect their emotional health and well-being through discussions about budgets, financial values, and core beliefs about money and spending. Research indicates that good financial health is important to reducing stress and increasing family stability and satisfaction; yet many therapists hesitate to address client's financial picture directly and with clarity. Anne's background in accounting combined with her pragmatic and solution-focused therapeutic approach enables her to address financial concerns frankly while providing valuable tools and strategies for improving fiscal health. Clients are able to address complex emotions and anxieties that frequently manifest when families encounter stress related to job loss, bankruptcy, illness, death, gambling, and other experiences in addition to generating a plan for long-term planning and management.
